Marian Kelly

Dear Marian:

I hope everything is going well. I have enjoyed watching your career as a comedian prosper. It was just last year I recruited you to perform at our station Christmas Party. I have had to explain to several why I didn't recruit you for this year. The reason is our Employee Committee chose to have a daylong event in the station which made a single entertainment focus impractical. Otherwise, I would have been seeking your skills again.

As you know, we have a diverse group who attend our Christmas parties. I have always been sensitive to wanting to entertain everyone without alienating anyone. I guess that comes from all these years in the television business. You did a wonderful job of accomplishing my goal. Everyone thought you were hysterical. When you have that type of universal appeal, entertaining everyone from the church deacon to the guy in the Motley Crue T-shirt, you've accomplished something. Maybe we could syndicate it. Anyway, have a great holiday.

Best regards,
